This morning we head to the outskirts of the city to meet Chengdu’s most famous residents, the giant pandas. The research centre opened in 1990 and covers an area of more than 90 acres. The resident pandas are said to be China’s spoiled children and they spend their days relaxing in large enclosures whilst the staff bring them bamboo by the bucket load. The centre works hard to breed the pandas with the ultimate aim of releasing them back into the wild. After visiting we head back to Chengdu to discover the Wenshu Temple. Built during the Tang Dynasty the monastery is home to more than 500 paintings and calligraphy exhibits as well as over 300 Buddha statues, including a rare jade Buddha bought from Burma in 1922. The New Year is celebrated from the 1st to the 10th of the first lunar month. For the first nine days people celebrate in their own villages and then on the final day a large community celebration is held around the monastery. The activities last most of the day and locals come to picnic in the grounds of the monastery, often singing and dancing to entertain the gods as they pray for good luck in the coming year. In the early afternoon we leave the monastery and drive to Tiger Leaping Gorge, said to be named after a local watched a tiger leap from one side of the gorge to the other to avoid crossing the river.

After our walk we will make our way to Shaxi, a small village on the Tea and Horse Trail and our home for the next two nights. On the way we stop at Jianchuan where we can see traditional houses of the Bai People. The Bais hold the colour white in high esteem and typically women wear white dresses with sleeveless jackets in red or blue with shoes embroidered in white cloth.
